“ One day, when we worked together at Fauquier County, we tried to meet up in a parking lot under a canopy of a bank because it was raining very hard. As I turned the corner to park alongside him in the opposite direction, I struck the only light pole in the parking lot that was hidden by my windshield pillar. He got out of his car and laughed so hard. And every time we were around somebody else, he would tell that story. He enjoyed telling that story so much, he would laugh as hard as the day he first saw it. I will forever miss him. God Bless him and his family.
