“ Dear Little Brother. You had been away for a long time, so when you returned home I thought how nice it would be to become reacquainted and see you start a new life. Little did I know the new life God had planned for you. But in His infinite wisdom He set you on that path. I somehow believed you would survive because you always acted like you would survive. You faced the challenges of this journey uncomplaining and with great courage. I imagine you now, over your trials, being reunited with loved one recently passed, long passed, and even some passed before we knew them; this part makes me happy for you. Live on in Peace!

“ You told me you had had enough. I said I knew and that it would be ok. Rest easy now. No more pain or worries. You are loved and will truly be missed. Our prayers are going out to your family in hopes they may find comfort in knowing you are in a better place. You fought the gallant fight. Love always.

My high school days were full of fun times with Bruce, sitting on the hill, hanging out with Chandler, Skip and David, Dina and I teasing him. I will always have fond memories and I am sure his spirit surrounds his family and friends. Life does not end with this journey.....it begins.
