“ David and I grew up in Dallas. Since I am 7 years older, we were not close growing up. As a child, I remember David's Dad passing away when he was very young. From that time forward, his Mother raised him alone, and based upon the fine man he became, she did an excellent job. As he was growing up, his Mother did not drive, so they did not have a car. Once David was old enough to get a driver's license, they bought a car. David was faithful to drive his Mother where she needed to go. After he enlisted in the Marines, throughout the rest of her life, he was faithful to check on her and come to Dallas when she needed him. After his Mother passed away, David was faithful in checking on my Mother, his Mother's older sister. Although my Mother has had dementia for several years, he was faithful to call her and talk to her, and did so, until he recently got sick. I know David is with the Lord now and not suffering, but it is sad to see him go.
