“ I knew Herbie from the Community in Edinboro. He and my wife Donna were in the Greenawalts household before we got married. Herbie used to hunt alot. He would bring deer & phesants home for dinner. I particularly liked the roast phesants. God Bless Your Family.

“ To the family of Herb McCullough:

We are very sorry to hear of Herb's passing. My parents and I would like to extend our deepest sympathy to all of you.

We lived on East 38th between Warsaw and Tuttle and I used to babysit for the 4 oldest McCullough boys before the two younger ones came along.

Everybody knew "Herbie." In fact, he was much like Dennis the Menace!---very often into mischief. One day, he asked my mom "How come everybody knows my name?"

You couldn't help but love Herbie. He really had a way of getting along with everyone. We are sure he will be missed by his family and friends.

Remember the good times you shared together. They will help you sustain you during this difficult time.

With sincere sympathy,

Sue (Staszewski) Wettekin and parents--Ed & Irene Staszewski

“ I remember Herbie well from many Saturday nights playing Risk at Tuhl Bannister's house in Edinboro, and indeed when he first met Ramona and began bringing her buy Tuhl's to visit (I lived with the Bannister's at the time, my girlfriend then was Sue and Herbie and later Ramona knew her too, of course). And Herbie was the drummer in our 50's rock band The Dorfoons, and played with us at weddings and dances (I played guitar, Tuhl and often Buzzy Matta sang lead, Bob Donofrio on piano, Marshall Norman on sax, and assorted bass players such as Earl Ebert and "Young" Sam Bowne). I still recall one wedding where we were all going to "grease" our hair back and wear white t-shirts and cigarette packs rolled up in our sleeves to perform. Herbie told me just to use water and hair spray, not vaseline -- but I ignored him and went with the vaseline. He of course washed his "grease" right out after the show, but I had to live with mine for many days! So sorry I lost track of Herbie after Edinboro, but blessed that he had such a fine life with Ramona and now two children! Rest in peace, Herbie, my memories of you are all good ones.

“ I Am So Sorry for Your Loss, You Have My Deepest Sympathy.

My company works for the banks preparing their foreclosed homes for sale. Herb loved it when I got a new property and invited him to rummage through the items people left behind. Among His greatest treasures found; the chess set from Manassas and his all-time favorite bird bath found in Leesburg.

Last year, I personally joined Herb with the fight of prostate cancer. In the month of June, I was Diagnosed with the same Disease. I truly regret we could not have done more to help him win.

Let us continue the fight in Herb's memory. With regular check-ups and early detection, this battle can be won!

“ Sorry Ramona - I REALLY do know how to spell your name. :-)

Several of us were reminiscing about Herb. It was after church this morning in the parking lot. All those funny & crazy memories we have. We could write a book, or two. :-)

I hadn't known Herb long when this 'unforgettable' moment occurred.

I was wearing a red Christmas outfit & was so proud of it. My friends were all complimenting me and I was graciously accepting their unanimous comments that I was looking good in my new clothes. So, I'm sure I was prancing around like peacock at this particular dinner party. That is... until Herb seen me.

He said, "Does that sweater really match that skirt?" I said, with shock, "Yes, it was sold together... OF COURSE it matches." Then he looked at me again and said, "It looks like you're wearing draperies."

I have never forgotten that, and that was over 10 yrs ago. Yes, it knocked my ego down a few notches, but it was pretty funny. My friends never let me forget it. I realized, from that moment on, I could always count on Herb for his 'honesty.' :-)

I will miss him.... already do.
