“ Jason, we are so sad you’ve left this earth. We hope you know how much we love you buddy. We will surely miss you and are sad you’ve left. Yet we will cherish the memories we were lucky to have with such a great friend & man that you were. Thank you for your friendship, laughter and caring ways. We will do our best to honor your legacy of caring for others and being there for your wife Becky as you were there for us. You made such a positive impact on so many people Jason and I hope you knew that. Your smile and caring nature will live on always. ❤️❤️ ps- thank you from the bottom of my heart for looking out for me and pushing me, your crazy ravens fan friend to take a chance on your friend Roland, the Steelers fan! You were most certainly right!!! We will fondly think of you always but most especially when it comes to football season! We will even cheer on your Tennessee Titans for you now, unless ya know they are playing one of our teams (lol) 😂!

Rest easy & enjoy Heaven Jason.

Love, Senie Byrne-Carter & Roland Carter

“ Jason has had the honor of touching so many people's lives, he and two other people started a very large gaming community called "East Coast Guardians" where he would spend quite a lot of his time playing with us, and from all of us from ECG we would really like to express our deepest condolences. Here are a couple nice messages we have to share about Jason a.k.a "Mr. Green"

ECG Member - August 18, 2022 at 08:41 AM

Mr. Green had an abrasive personality at times but that's why we loved him. Once you got closer to him it was obvious that he had a heart of gold. One of the best memories is knifing him whenever possible (even if it meant dying over and over) this inevitably ended in a ban. It was totally worth the repercussions and I got great joy out of pissing him off! I would then have to appeal to Newq and Carrier who would ultimately go to bat for me with Green. We became close later through years of gameplay and countless hours on Ventrillo. Guild Wars with Newq, Green and Carrier hold some of my best gamer memories. Mr. Green played WOW with me which he became instantly addicted. It seemed like he had over a year of game time within the first 6 months... I look back on the time we spent at Capper's playing poker and drinking games. What Green and Newq created is truly something that I will forever appreciate. ECG was where I chose to spend my free time in my 20's and I have many close friends to this day. While many of us drifted apart, this community is a testament to who Mr. Green was. He will be missed and thought of often. I was at Capper's two weeks ago along with Merlin and we mentioned him in our conversations. Love you Green!

“ I knew Jason from when he was a young boy. He used to crack me up and keep me on my toes at work. He grew up to be a good man. He will be dearly missed.

“ Jason was a joy to raise. He was so sweet and a very happy child. I loved him with all my heart. Scott came into our lives when Jason was a teenager. They quickly grew to love each other too. Jason had hundreds of friends because of his outgoing nature. I will miss him so much.

“ I met Jason when he was 15 years old. My favorite memory is of the chaos of Nerf Wars between the boys in our first apartment together. I'm so glad I got to watch him grow from a teenager to the man he became. I am truly honored to have been a part of his life. His father and I are devastated by his loss.
