They moved to England for a few years and then settled down in South Orange, NJ. Joan was a registered nurse, taking care of others at Kessler Rehabilitation Hospital in West Orange, NJ, as charge nurse of the night shift, so she could be home for her children during the day. She and Dennis took great pride in their family. Their door was always open, where everyone would be treated as family with laughter and good cooking. After the death of Dennis, Joan eventually moved to Virginia Beach, VA with son, Gregory, and his family. After a long, heart breaking, physical and mental decline caused by dementia, she moved to a memory care unit in Gainesville, VA where she continued to lift others with her lovely smile and twinkling blue eyes. She was an avid Bridge player, lover of antique shopping, traveler, sweets, and most of all, a loving mom and grandma.
