“ I worked with Gene in the early to mid eighties. When I first met him he seemed this rough, gruff welder. He intimidated the hell out of me for about the first two weeks we worked together but it didn't take long to realize he was just a big friendly teddy bear. He was a hard working man and once he called me a _____ slave driver (fill in the blank). That that hard working man called me that I have always held as a badge of honor. Rest in peace Gene. I'll bet he's fixing baloney gravy in heaven!
