“ As a kid I stayed with Roy and his sisters and I would dust his Avon cars every week for an allowance that he would give me ...then he took me to 7 eleven and I spent it on a slurpee. He was good to work for and he gave good advice ...don't never buy a Vega. ... I will miss him and love him always.

“ Roy, I want you to know that I enjoyed every moment that I spend with you and Kathy at the cancer center. We talked about so many things. I know that you would laugh and talk even when you didn't feel like just because I was there. As the old saying you have a memory like an elephant. They say they don't forget anything and neither did Roy. I would set and look at Roy while he was taking his treatments and my heart would just break for him. It was hard to hold back the tears, but I didn't want him to see my tears. Roy wasn't a person that likes a lot of attention. So on his birthday I stopped at the store and picked up a birthday balloon, turtle candy, and a small cake. Now he couldn't hide that it was birthday time. So many people came and wished him a happy birthday. Three individuals from the cancer center came and sung happy birthday to him. Roy's face turned so red, but it was good day for him. We all had fun that day. Now I am so sorry to see you leave and I will miss you so very much. There will always be a piece of my heart missing because you took it with you. Love you always

“ I worked with both Kathy and Roy and it was delightful. He had such a sense of humor, I remember when he nicknamed me "Kodak" the first day I started. My husband and I have always considered him (and Kathy) dear, dear, friends. My heart is hurting for Kathy and Mary, I know they were the light of his life. God Bless them, they now have an angel looking over them. With prayers and love, you will be missed by all who knew you.

“Roy Boy” - my nickname for my sweet pal, was an honest, hardworking man who loved his family deeply. He and I shared a love of music and would challenge each other to guessing the names of songs or artists. His courage and determination while battling his illness, truly amazed me. I love him and will miss him. Thanks for loving me like family RB.
