“ Sandy was full of life and truly young at heart. While Sandy worked on your hair, she'd talk about her husband, Hans, how he would bring her drinks on the beach, cook wonderful dishes, and take her to parties. Sandy loved him so much.

Sandy talked about her children, who she adored. Sabrina, at 3 or 4, could crack an egg with one hand and put it in a bowl. She learned that from Hans, the chef. And Lucas, how she'd read with him, letting him read a page then she'd read a page, just like I'd suggested. She took her children to the pool almost every day and to Kings Dominion every week during the summers.

Sandy told me of her Mom's bout with cancer and how her Mom made a quilt for Lucas' teachers every year, and about her sister and brother.

Sandy's life was an open book. She was delightful and fun. She enjoyed her work with Lundy and was so fond of him. Sandy called me once to cancel an appointment; their dog had died. I know she was sad but she was more concerned about her children. Sandy was a wonderful mother.

Sandy enjoyed her life, although it was far too short. Sandy touched many lives. She made the world a more beautiful place, by making the people's hair pretty and giving so much of herself to her friends, and especially to her family. Sandy will be missed by many people.
