“ I remember seeing Mr. Pitkin only a few times about 40 years ago when I was friends with some of his sons, particularly Mike. While I was around, Mr. Pitkin seemed very quiet. My parents remarked that Mike and Jimmy were two of the most well behaved and respectful kids they had ever had as guests at our house, and I remember Mike having a very respectful and decent way about him. I thought on more than one occasion all those years ago that I should follow Mike's example. Now, as a parent myself, I know that Mike and Jimmy reflected their parents' influence on them. That I still remember these things is a tribute to both Mr. and Mrs. Pitkin, may they both rest in peace.
