“ Please accept my sympathy on your loss. I just learned of Winston's death in the CIA Retirement Association Quarterly magazine. We carpoled for a couple of years back in the '80s. In the winter, when it came time for Winston's turn to drive, we knew to bring a blanket since there was no heat in the car. That's all I remember about the car, and that it was white. There were five of us so we could keep each other warm. On one particularly bad snowy day, and since it was just the two of us, we just decided to call it quits and sat in the Manassas Bakery. Winston would also point out every redbud tree to me because I, at first, didn't believe there was such a tree. Silly memories but my memories of a good guy.

“ My lasting memory of Winston frequently occurred when we were young, and although not very profound, is of him in a rocking chair, humming and eating a big bowl of Wheaties. He was a wonderful man and brother-in-law and we will miss him. Winston rest in peace at the hand of God
